FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

WEDNESDAY, April 15-6 P. M. The signs of an impending breakdown in the stock market are multiplying on all sides, and the utter lemoralization of the bull cliques, by which it is alone tioned:ed, would seem to be near at hand. These liques have been parasites upon the body public for long time past, and their extermination would, to use a homely proverb, be a good riddance of bad rubbish. They have inflated prices inordinately and the street" systematically at fre-intervals with an unscrupulousness when exposed, is calculated to do anybut tempt the outside public into their skilfully laid traps. Their reign is over, however, id it is only a question of how little loss they can ape with. A reaction has at length set in from inflation of the last few years, and the break in intic and Pacific Mail, followed by the break from five to eight per cent in express shares is only the precursor of still greater in the railway share market, and the which has overtaken railway proin England and France is more than e experienced here. Sir Morton Peto came over to this country in the plenitude, to all appearances, of his wealth and power, but, like Hudson, the ailway king before him, he falled, and his collapse was the most inglorious of its kind we can remember, cause it was shown that he had been wilfully keeping up false appearances for years; and why are the magnates of our own Stock Exchange more exempt than the two men mentioned were from fall-ure? This bubble, which has been growing so long must be pricked in the public interest; but apart from that the natural tendency of prices on the Stock Exchange is downward towards legitimate values. Government securities and first class city allway bonds are worth what they are selling for, and therefore will or at least should not decline, but the speculative railway and other stocks are ling far above their real value. No six per cent rallway shares are worth 115, and no eight per cent worth 126, and much less are non-dividend 900 Quicksliver Min's Co lying stocks, under existing circumstances, orth what they are selling for. We have been ng the public for some months past of the panic with which the market was threatened, and w that the danger is full upon it we repeat our adion, especially to the banks. These instituions are unfortunately loaded up with speculative ocks, upon which they have advanced more than their real value, and they stand in a position where they are liable to become the virtual wners of many of these securities at any time. We have only to point to Atlantic and Pacific Mail and the express stocks for instances in illustration, and en a steamship stock goes down more than sixtytwo per cent in a single day it is reasonable to infer that railway stocks may go down far and fast enough to sweep away all ordinary margins. do. ... Comptroller of the Currency should at once examine into the condition of their affairs, as he is authorized to do by the National Currency act, and Congress amend the National Currency act so as to make it unlawful to loan on speculative securities to the extent they have been hitherto doing. In this way some of the Wall street institutions may avoid the fate of the Credit Mobilier in France, which failed with all its enormous capital simply because of the depreciation in value of the stocks upon which at had made advances. The borrowers were unable to take up their loans, and the Credit Mobilier became the owner of the collaterals, in which there was no market. The London banks were similarly saddled with a heavy load of speculative stocks, and hence the failure of some of their number in the panic of The storm here is only brewing, and therefore there is yet time for sail to be taken in before it sweeps away the gaudy fabric that has been reared by the gamblers of the Stock Exchange. church that night and that the child in a deed in her arms; when I arrested her she told me she was going home; she was greatly agitated; I did not see the child in any person's arms but the woman's at the station house.

Sergeant Christie, sworn—I was behind the desk at the Eighth precinct on Sunday night when the woman was brought in; Captail Mills gave the order to take her to the Fifteenth precinct station house after the charge was made; under the same circumstances, had ne not been there I should have given the same order; in fact, I could not have done otherwise and obey the rules of the department; I assumed the statement of officer Stevenson to be true and judged that the woman was in a state that justified her being detained.

Cross-examined by Commissioner Bosworth—She said she lived at No. 3 Chariton street; the house bearing that number in Chariton street; about six blocks away from our station house; it would take a person about twenty minutes to go there and back to the station house; nobody was sent to No. 3 Chariton street on the night the woman was arrested to ascertain whether or not she resided there.

Patrick Webb, sworn—I am sexton of St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church; about eight o'clock on Thursday evening a boy came in the vestry and said there was a woman in the church who had a dying child she wanted to be baptized; I told Pather Eugene, and he looked at the child and pronounced it dead; the woman then began to cry: I thought she was under the influence of liquor; she wanted to leave the child in the church; I think she said she boarded at No. 91 Chariton street; she may have said No. 98.

Cross-examined by Commissioner Brennan—The woman was not what I call drunk—only a little "Hoozy" like; she was able to take care of herself.

TESTINONY OF CAPTAIN CAPPREY.

Captain Caffrey, sworn—I have been an officer ten years and a captain eight years; I came into my station house about a quarter to eleven o'clock on Monday night from the Cooper Institute, where I had been, with a squad of my m away I offered to send an officer with her to see that she arrived home safely, as she appeared weak, but she refused to accept my offer; when I the night of her arrest ordered that the child should be taken from her and put in a cool place my intention was to allow her to remain in the sitting room, but when I found that it was impossible to take the child from her except by using faces. I had her placed in the ner arrest ordered that the child should be taken from her and put in a cool place my intention was to allow her to remain in the sitting room, but when I found that it was impossible to take the child from her except by using force I had her placed in the most comfortable cell in the house; she was treated with the utmost tenderness by all in the station.

Cross-examined by Gommissioner Brennan—The cells of my precinct are in a building separate from the main building; the cells are warmed by the woman state that the woman is the station of the following the state of the room; on the warmed. The state of the room; on the warmed woman is streamed the state of the room; on the warmed. The streamen is the state of the room of the Fifteenth desk duty on the night the woman was brought in; when I learned that the child in her arms was dead I sent word to the Eighth, asking if the officer in command to knew the fact and if she should be detained, when I was answered "Yes;" I tried to take the child from her, but she pressed it to her bosom and exclaimed that no one but the Holy Fathers could bury it; I let her remain in the sitting room until the captain came in, with the intention of consulting him about what deposition should be made of the woman and the child; when he came in and I told him about the woman he seemed perfectly horrided, and remarked that it was one of the saddest things he had ever heard of; he then ordered the child to be wrapped up carefully and placed in a cool place till the arrival of the cornor; told the captain it was useless to try and take the child away from the mother, and so we let her take it to the cornor in the sitting room; they are immediately locked up when brought in; it had ward the child to be wrapped up carefully and placed in a cool place till the arrival of the cornor; told the captain it was useless to try and take the child to take care of herself; I judged she was under the influence of liquor, considering her manner and certain actions.

Marine Disasters BRIG MARY GIVEN (Br), from St John, NB, for Havana, ras spoken 5th inst, lat 27 22, lon 78 40. leaking and with loss Cross examined—I wrote the article on the "Eighth Ward Outrage" in the Times; I heard some officer give an order to take the woman back to the prison; Sergeant Haggerty seemed to be startled at the idea of having to lock the woman up seeing that she had the dead child in her arms; I saw some person make an effort to take the child from the mother; I considered it an inhumanity on the part of the police to lock the woman up under the circumstances; I do not believe a captain or sergeant in charge of a desk is bound to lock up a person on the charge of a patrolman without investigating the charge; I heard the woman beg piteously to be allowed to go and call on a priest about the child; I think I heard, the officer say that the child had died in the woman's arms in a church; my opinion was on the night of the arrest that the woman was in a fit condition to take care of herself; that the sergeant did not fully investigate the case before locking her up, and I think now as I did then; Dr. Griswold and several other persons who were in the Fifteenth precinct station at the time the woman was not so much under the induence of liquor, if she was under its influence at all, to justify her incarceration.

Solemon Cohen, sworn—I am a reporter of the press; on the night of the arrest of the woman in question I went over to the Fifteenth precinct station house and with the consent of the captain went down to the cells to see her; she told me the child had died in a church, I think in Thompson street; that when she found the child dead she went into the porch and then out into the street, where several boys got about her to annoy her; she called on an officer to protect her, when he arrested her and took her to the station house; she told me she lived at No. 3 Chariton street; she appeared perfectly sober and rational; the child was lying on the bench by her side; she did not seem to be under the slightest influence of liquor.

Cross-examined—I cannot say whether the door fastened on the inside; the woman did not look happy SCHE REDBURGER AND SELECTION OF THE SELE give the number of drops of water in the Hudson as the number of outrages by the police—(sensation)—I have often written about the good actions of the police.

TESTIMONY OF CORONER SCHIRMER.

Coroner Schirmer, sworn—I am one of the coroners of his county; I held the inquest on the body of the dead child; officer Stevenson, the mother and my deputy were examined; the verdiet was that the child had died of general debility, from being prematurely born; the mother gave her residence as No. 3 Chariton street, or rather that she worked there; I sent an officer with her to see if any person knew her at that place, and he returned and said that she had worked there and was well known to them; they gave her a good character; her statement at the inquest was that she was married but had been descried by her husband some time previous; she stated that she had gone to church, and discovered the child dead in her arms.

TESTIMONY OF OFFICER STEVENSON.

Officer Stevenson, sworn—When on post on Monday night a citizen came to me and said there was a woman near by with a dead infant in her arms; I found a crowd about her; asked her what she had in her arms and she said nothing; I examined and found the dead infant in her arms; she was under the influence of liquor; I then thought the best to take her to the station house; Captain Mills examined the child at the station house and found no marks of violence on the body; at the command of Captain Mills, after I had made a charge of intoxication against the woman, I took her to the Fifteenth precinct station.

Cross-examined by Commissioner Brennan—I saw her the following morning when I took her before the magistrate; I did not make an affidavit agai isther, but preferred the charge of intoxication; the judge discharged her.

By Commissioner Bosworth—I am certain I smelled the woman's breath the night of her arrest and it indicated liquor; she said she had been to church that night and that the child had died in her arms; when I arrested her she told me she was going home; she was SHIP SARAH NEWMAN was sold at St Thomas on the 18th ult for $5996. ult for $3500.

BARK PERSIA, previously reported ashers at Fire Island, was sold at auction on the lith inst for $117.50 for wrecking LAUNCHED—Mr Boole, of East Boston, has just launched a whaling brig of 500 tons, which is owned by a Provincetown frm.
